CASHIER'S DEATH CLOSED BANK

RUN FOLLOWED THAT EX-HAUSTED ITS READY ASSETS.

The Cooper Exchange Was to Depose Krapp as Cashler Last Thursday and on Wednesday Night He Fell or Threw Himself From a Window at Home.

The Cooper Exchange Bank, at Avenue A and Second street, was closed yesterday morning by State Banking Superintendent F. D. Kilburn and was put in charge of Bank Examiner Albert C. Judson. The constant withdrawals of deposits since last Wednesday, when the cashier of the bank, are equal to any corset emergency. George S. Krapp, fell or threw himself from a window at his home, 200 West Ninetyseventh street, left the bank short of money to meet demands.

Supt. Kilburn had been watching the condition of the bank and early yesterday morning he sent word to Mr. Judson to close the doors. Mr. Judson said yesterday after an incomplete examination that he thought the depositors would be paid in full, and there was no sign of any shortage. The bank was organized in 1903 by Samuel Gotthelf, who had been connected with the Union Square Bank and who induced many of his friends in and around Fourteenth street to take stock in the new enterprise. The bank's capital was $100,000 and the paid up surplus $50,000. The deposits on June 6, 1905, were more than $710,000. When the Federal Bank failed the deposits dropped off about half. Then string the deposits dropped off about half. Then when the news of Cashier Krapp's death became public a steady withdrawal of deposits, thousands of dollars daily, followed until the bank was unable to meet the drain. Within the last week or so $156,000 has been withdrawn.

No statement of the bank's condition was made public yesterday and Mr. Judson did not know when one would be ready. While the belief was general that depositors would be paid in full, it was thought that the stockholders would probably be assessed slightly to make up a deficiency caused by some bad loans. The report of September s showed $553,216 liabilities and $49,278 surplus.

The leans of the bank were small. Recently some of the stockholders have objected to some of them. Supt. Kilburn about a month ago met one of the stockholders, who called his attention to the management of the bank. As a result of Mr. Kilburn's investigations it was said yesterday, the directors decided to depose Cashier Krapp and give him a minor place. He was to lose his office last Thursday. On Wednesday night he either fell or threw himself out of the window of his house, despite the efforts of his wife and his son Herbert to hold him. It was said at the bank would pay depositors in full.

Cashier Krapp, but a man had been appointed to Cashier Krapp but a man had been practically agreed upon. His examiner Judson from his residence, 22 Convent avenue, that he bank west cash and had had an experience.

> WOMEN IN FIERCE BATTLE. Nothing Hurt But the Atmosphere-All

About a Fur Deal. John Dugan of 718 Seventh avenue, his wife Elizabeth and Mrs. Elizabeth Brown of 122 West Forty-seventh street, were prisoners in the West Side court yesterday morning, charged with fighting in the morning, charged with fighting in the street.

Mrs. Dugan is a dealer in furs and Mrs. Brown bought some from her for $150, paying $50 down. Yesterday the Dugans were passing the Brown house, when they saw Mrs. Brown's furniture being put into a van. Mrs. Dugan at once called on Mrs. Brown and demanded the remaining $100 for the furs, insinuating that Mrs. Brown meant to skip without paying.

Mrs. Brown resented the insinuation and hot words led to blows. Each grabbed a weapon from the pile of curtain poles and umbrellas that stood on the sidewalk and fell to. Dugan felt compelled to take a hand, but couldn't do much damage for fear of hitting his own spouse. The two women, however, fell to with a will and rent the air with vicious swipes of their weapons.

A crowd collected and cheered the fighters lustily. Policeman Brown, of the traffic squad, finally butted in. Magistrate Baker discharged the combatants with an admonition to be good.

WOULDN'T ADMIT MRS. HOPKINS.

One of the stockholders of the bank is Max Schwartz of Liberty Hall, East Houston street. He said yesterday that he was confident that all depositors would be paid in full, and he backed up this feeling by telling some of the unfortunate ones who deposited their money through the messenger after the bank was really closed that he would be willing to help them out if they were in a tight pinch.

the sister-in-law of the dead woman, who witnessed the tragedy. The wife and mother-in-law of young Hopkins went to the flat accompanied by a policeman, but Hopkins, who has for some time been separated from his wife, refused to admit them. The two women then left the house and, going to the elevated railroad station nearby, waited until the funeral party, consisting of the hearse and two coaches, started for Greenwood.

Mrs. Hopkins told the reporters that she had separated from her husband because they could not get along together, and that she never would return to him. She said she called to have a last look at her mother-in-law, although she had something to do with her domestic troubles.

Mrs. Mary Johnson of 252 Greene avenue yesterday called on Police Inspector Cross and denied that she had stated that the elder Hopkins told her two weeks ago that he wouldn't rest until he had his wife's life and that he had showed her two pistols. Some other woman, she said, must have

MRS. DAVIDSON ASKS DIVORCE. Wife of Baltimore's ex-Mayor Takes Her Troubles to Court.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10 .- Former Mayor Robert C. Davidson, who gained notoriety last May through an elopement escapade, was sued for divorce to-day by Mrs. Davidson on statutory grounds. Mrs. Davidson also asks alimony. The domestic difficulties of the Davidsons first became public last May, when Mr. Davidson retired as president of the Baltimore Trust and Guarantee Company and left Baltimore, accompanied, it was alleged, by a trained nurse.

Mr. Davidson returned and a reconcilia-tion was affected, but a few weeks ago it was rumored that he had again left the city.
Ex-Mayor Davidson is said to have taken up his residence in New York.
